

Solar Admiration

Story by Arubazu!

I found myself wandering the streets of my home town, wandering left and right as I spent the day sauntering down the road. Eventually ending up at my regular favorite hangout spot, or as some would call it, a secret base. This tall warehouse stood aged and decrepit but it was a nice spot as I could hear the sound of the gentle wind on the chimes I set up. Not too far away I can also see the beach down the way.

This place led to many times of relaxation as the wind blew through the chimes and I hear their gentle sounds again. The swaying of nearby tree's flow from the wind and the delightful warmth of the sun as beamed through the high windows. My own personal paradise away from the hum drums of normal life. I sat down on a mat I left there to relax and listen.

The calming sounds of my surroundings invigorated me as they always did, a feeling of warm delight coursing through me from head to toe. The energy was building turning into power that took over my whole being bit by bit as I relaxed and was swamped with this emotion. Until that is I heard a crash and crumble. Opening my eyes to see that my relaxation has led me to actually change in size. My body was much bigger than before as it filled up the warehouse from end to end. The power I felt must've led to this and not only size but muscle as I turned to see I was shaping up to have a nice figure here and there too.

I relax once more and close my eyes feeling that the power was still there within me, flowing like a pleasant stream. The stream becoming a calming wave that washes over my body, as I hear the creaking of metal and the crushing of objects. Telling me my figure was expanding once more, I held my eyes close waiting for the surprise of how I'd look once I open them. I can hear the sound of crushing tree's and crumbling metal. I can feel the wind waving through my hair and soon I can feel the heels of my feet getting wet.

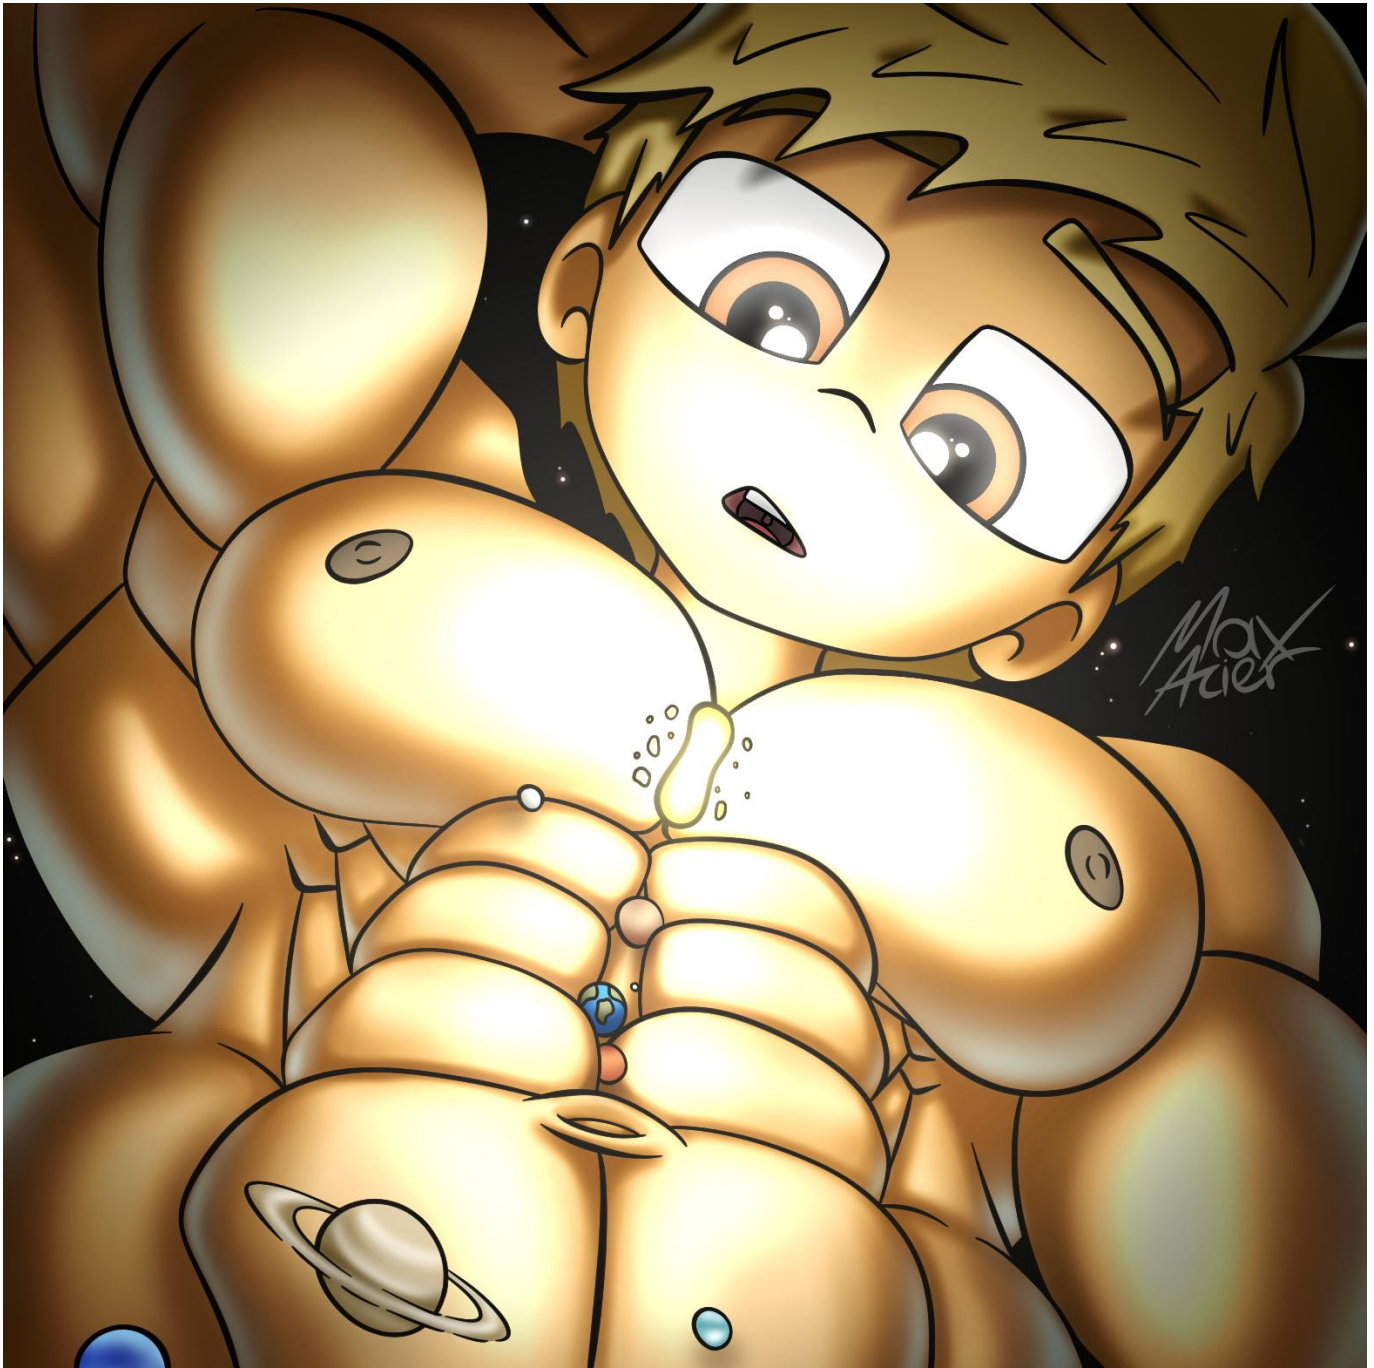

I open my eyes and gaze in amazement that I can see over the mountains and hills beyond. My body was massive beyond compare as the whole of my town was sat upon by me. My head was taller than any skyscraper and my hair grazed the clouds. My body now filled with nice muscles like a good set of pecs that blocked the view of the lower half of my body. The thick abs on my stomach were like 8 city blocks given how big I was. The thick cords in my legs extended far past the beach and deep into the ocean although I'm not sure if I would call it deep anymore.

I could hear the wind picking up all around me and see the waves pushing out at my feet, my viewpoint slowly increasing as I could see the curve of the planet earth. Wonder turned to worry as thought about whether or not I'd be able to breath seeing as how I was already breaking through the atmosphere. I had my answer soon enough as I realized my body created its own atmosphere as I saw the line of it as I broke through low orbit.

I started to feel a sense of weightlessness as the earth's gravity couldn't hold me or my massive muscles, my body now slightly floating above the planet as I continued to expand. Satellites come and go around my head and a few go down my throat to be swallowed easily by accident as I continue to expand. The rush of power continues as when I blink I could nearly hold the entire earth like a beach ball in my hands but the planet is quickly shrinking. The thrill of seeing what I once called home nothing more than the size of a baseball now was pure bliss in of itself.

I soon realize with this power the whole of our solar system is drifting not towards our sun but towards me. I have become so immense that the earth is no more than a marble in my fingertips. A marble that soon manages to slip away and fall into my abs. I don't know whether or not it had to do with my own gravitational pull or not but now all the planets seeked out that area. I could see Venus, Mars, Jupiter which was the biggest marble on my chest. As I breathed a sigh of fascination and delight even the sun was pulled towards me. Nestled right between my pecs and felt more like a delightfully warm.

I notice I stopped growing for now as all of our solar system is held within my muscles, I look up at the stars and galaxies all around wondering how much more my body can hold just like them.